A day in the life of Xia Hui

My day starts at seven o'clock with organized physical activity outside in the schoolyard led by one of the teachers. When I was in junior high school things used to be easier, but now I am in high school, and I have to work very hard.

I have to be in class every day at eight o'clock for roll call. I have to wear a uniform at all times. I have many classes during the day. I have to study subjects in my own language, including mathematics and science, but I also have English classes once a day.

All students have to play at least one musical instrument in my school, and I chose the violin. I am expected to play in the orchestra on all special occasions or presentations in the school. I have to do at least three hours of homework each night on top of violin practice.

On weekends I have to do homework and prepare for the following week's classes. I have very little free time, but when I do, I like to play volleyball with some of my friends from school.
